Subject: CARRIAGE Assessment of ~~_____~~.

1. Object of Test: 'gen ral CARRIAGE assessment was given to promote operational security and to aid in the best utilization of the subject's capabilities.
2. Procedure: The subject was assessed on 26 October, standard CARRIAGE procedure being employed.
3. Estimated Reliability of Results: Subject appeared to be normal and reacted well during the test. Reactions to control questions were fairly strong. Results can be classified as "reliable," in a scale of "reliable," "fairly reliable," and "unreliable."
4. Summary of Results: No reactions were recorded in response to questions on identity, and subject apparently told the truth in regard to the essentials of his background. He apparently received the order of the Red Star, was taken prisoner by the Germans, and later served as General Vlasov's adjutant. He does not appear to have pronounced criminal tendencies, although his record as a successful black-market operator and his adventures as a prisoner and displaced person suggest that the subject is adept at circumventing the law. No reactions were recorded in response to questions on homosexual behavior.

The subject appears to be genuinely anti-Communist, and no reactions were recorded in response to questions on association with Soviet intelligence organizations. Subject was sensitive to a question on connections with German intelligence during World War II, and it is probable that he withheld information on his activities in the Red-Army-German-Vlasov triangle during that war.
5. Operator's Estimate of the Subject: The subject has excellent self-control, strong nerves, and undoubtedly is calm under pressure. He weighs his words and is deliberate in speech and action. He is well-educated and intelligent, and good at handling people. He appears older than he actually is.

The subject seems to be interested primarily in helping himself and has no party connections. He appears to be anti-Communist because of personal and family suffering and because collectivism restricts his freedom of action. He usually got along much better than others, in the Soviet Union, the RFA, and as a displaced person, because of his strong nerves and practical mind.
6. Remarks and Recommendations: Properly rewarded, the subject would probably cooperate loyally with the Americans. He apparently told the Americans the basic truth in regard to those aspects of his career covered in the assessment with the exception of probable withholding of information about his relationship with the Germans during World War II.
